TRIBUTES TO DEPARTED ELKS

Touching Memorial Services Held by the Order.

FINE MUSICAL PROGRAMME

AND J. C. LEARY.

All that could be done with music, song and eloquent tributes to revive sweet memories of departed brothers was done last evening by Salt Lake lodge No. 85 of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. The regular annual memorial services under the auspices of the order were held at the Grand theatre and called together an audience that crowded the building from the rear of the large stage to the doors. There were not seats enough by far to accommodate the audience and many were compelled to pressive, because of the recent and tragic death of Dr. McKenna, and many beautiful tributes were paid to his memory by the various speakers. The principal address of the evening was by Judge O. W. Powers, and it is certain that no more eloquent eulogy certain that no more eloquent eulogy was ever uttered in this city on the

was ever uttered in this city on the underlying principles of fraternal orders. The programme throughout was one of high merit; some of the musical numbers were especially fine.

The decorations were very simple, and consisted almost wholly of American flags, draped in various places, and pains in front of the stage. In the foreground on the stage were seated the officers and a number of prominent the officers and a number of prominent members of the lodge in evening fress, together with the speakers of the evening. Back of them were about sixty members of the order, and in the rear on an elevated platform was Held's band. All the boxes of the theatre were occupied by prominent Elks and their lady friends.

Elks and their lady friends.

The committee having in charge the services was composed of C. S. Kinney, chairman; H. E. Booth, Joseph Enzensperger, H. A. Leipsinger and W. R. Sibley. It was announced that similar services were being held last evening in every city in the United States of over 5,000, where an Elks' lodge was in existence. Here the services were held in honor of the memory of Dr. P. J. McKenna, Dr. J. W. Smith, Dr. K. A. Kjos, W. W. Miles, Frank H. Peters, E. J. Pratt, Lester Wallach and W. A. Watkins, members of lodge No. 85, who have members of lodge No. 85, who have

Following the music came the opening exercises by the members of the order on the stage; these exercises included the calling of the roll of the dead brothers by Secretary A. W. to social pleasures. "The time has passed," said the judge, "when a man's moral standing is judged by the length of his face, and his ability to cause gloom to actile down over any gathering which he may change to attend". ing which he may chance to attend." He paid a high tribute to Brigham Young for his wisdom in furnishing harmless modes of recreation for his charge that it is inimical to religion and the speaker closed his address on this phase of his subject with these words: "I know that your hand is not raized against religion, for you interfere with no man's religious belief and you have furnished a common meeting place where the Catholic, the Protestant the Mormon the Lew and the place where the Catholic, the Protestant, the Mormon, the Jew and the Gentile appear to recognize that they are all children of one great Father." The foundation principles of the order—charity, justice, brotherly love and fidelity—were dwelt upon in Judge Powers' eloquent style, and many beautiful illustrations and figures of speech were brought into play to emphasize their meaning. Many apt quotations from the great men of the past were also used. Speaking of the departed members of the Salt Lake lodge, Judge Powers paid an eloquent tribute to Dr. Fowers paid an eloquent tribute to Dr. McKenna, and from this point he entered upon a most interesting discussion of the desire, born in every heart, to live in the memory of friends after death. He closed with the stirring words of Dickens on immortality. The address of Judge Powers was listened to with the deepest interest from beginning to end. After he had closed, Mrs. Swensen's ladies double quartette sang "Oh, Holy Stillness" and Henry Miles sang as a bass solo "The Light of the World."

Address by J. C. Leary. James C. Leary then spoke on "Our Organization." In opening, he said that it was on such occasions as this memorial service that the members were rounded with the best influences, and that it was then the principles of the order came out in the clearest light. He dwelt on the true meaning of the services, said that retrospects were always said and that three sigwere always sad and that three sig-nificant words in the order are "live, love and leave." Mr. Leavy also paid a high tribute to the character at Dr. McKenna, and thought that memor-ial services were valuable, as they show the people that well-spent lives appreciated even after the dear Mr. Leary spoke at some length or the principles of the order. It is not "live and let live" with Elks, he said, but "live and help others to live." Elks are of the world they live in the world and they purpose to move with it. At the same time, it is their principle to do good to all mankind. The Salt Lake lodge, the speaker said, had always been popular in this community, which fact is attested in the growth of the iodge. He spoke of the time, now near at hand, when the time, now near at hand, when the lodge would have its own home, and well-send your little to try, if you like.

in entertaining the grand lodge of the order in Salt Lake next year.

Held's band gave "Il Trovatore" in fine style at the close of Mr. Leary's address, and then came the musical treat of the evening, the singing of "The Holy City" as a zolo by W. R. Sibley. It was a fine rendition of the popular hymn and the treat was enjoyed by everyone in the house. The popular hymn and the treat was enjoyed by everyone in the house. The ladies' quartette sang a serenade song under the direction of Mrs. Swenson, and Held's band closed the musical programme with a short selection. The closing exercises by the members of the lodge included the singing of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and a benediction by Dr. Thacker.

FLOWERS, DIRGES AND TEARS MARRIED SIX WEEKS AGO

Fellow-churchmen, Eiks, Knights of Columbus and members of the Order of Workmen followed the remains of Dr. P. J. McKenna to their last resting place on the hillside at Caivary yesterday afternoon. The day was gloomy. Heavy clouds hung overhead and everything seemed in harmony with the mournful dirge from Held's band that echoed through the streets as the cortege wended its way from as the cortege wended its way from covery, but on Saturday a change for LITTLE BABE BURNED the Keogh-McKenna hospital to St. the worse came, and in a few hours ness and hope which the couple and their friends had believed would have been their lot.

Mr. Vaughn was then suffering from fever, but believing that she could be as a ministering angel to him, Miss Calton urged that the wedding day be hastened. It was with difficulty that the young groom summoned the strength to stand with his bride before Dr. Talmage and the small company of guests to say the words which bound their hearts together. The ceremony was shortened and with the congratulations were mingled sentiments of sympathy for the prostrate lover.

From the day Mrs. Vaughn became a bride until she felt the words of widowhood, she has been constantly with her stricken husband. Her every effort was to prolong his life. It was not even her pleasure to eat a meal with him after the wedding.

MR. SNEDAKER'S STATEMENT.

To the Editor of The Herald: In Sunday's Herald I see an article accompanying an account of a monu-ment erected by Mr. D. Davidson to William Calder, in which are state ments I feel compelled to answer. The article says: 'As the story was told by the Davidson family, three weeks before the day set for the marriage of Miss Agnes Davidson and Captain Smith, Dr. Snedaker enticed the girl into his of-fice and, by means of drugs, accom-plished her ruin. The family, naturally, pushed her ruin. The laminy, naturally, after learning the facts, were intensely bitter toward the doctor. He was warned not to come upon the premises. Over this affair, the doctor and Captain Smith had words and the latter slapped Snedaker in the face. Bad blood existed among all concerned and the tragedy was but the natural cul-

Before the shooting Dr. Snedaker went to City Marshal Burt and told him of the accusation, and said there was no truth in it. After the shooting Miss Davidson denied it. The statement is made that Snedaker was sitting in the other end of the car. Without warning he suddenly arose and opened fire with a revolver. At the first shot Captain Smith fell. The second bullet, aimed at Davidson, the ond bullet, aimed at Davidson, the glrl's father, pierced the side of the car. Before he could again pull the trigger, Officer Calder sprang forward and grabbed his hand. The third shot pierced Calder's sleeve, but Snedaker was disarmed.

There was but one shot fired by Dr. Snedaker and after that Smith, who had threatened to kill on sight, had advanced to within a few feet of him with his hand on his hip pocket. Dr. with his hand on his hip pocket. Dr. Snedaker was then disarmed by Officer Calder and turned with his back to Smith, when the two shots were fired by Smith, both striking him in the back and killing him almost instantly.
